Professor Shortlidge Kills His Bride of a Month.

The Principal of Media Academy Goes Out Walking with His Wife and Shoots Her to Death.

Media, Pa., Dec. 31.—Swittha C. Shortlidge, principal of the Media Academy for Boys, while out promenading to-day with his wife, who was a bride of only a month, shot and instantly killed her.

For three weeks Professor Shortlidge has been confined to his home with the grip. His wife was a faithful, untiring nurse, but he did not seem to improve rapidly. On Saturday he ventured out for a walk, his wife accompanying him, but he did not go any further than the spacious porch of the academy. This morning he took another walk, with his wife on his arm, in the direction of East Media, passing people without his usual signs of recognition. A few minutes later, while passing through some woodland on Jefferson street, those who were in that neighborhood were startled by hearing six shots, and, on looking, saw what seemed to be a scuffle on the street.

Among those who heard and saw this was Chief of Police McKean, who ran to the spot, where he found Mrs. Shortlidge dead and the frenzied man clinging to her and calling for her to come back to him. A revolver was lying empty by the side of the dying woman. When the bystanders approached Professor Shortlidge attempted to drive them off, and threw himself on the body of his wife, now rapidly being chilled in the snow. The chief of police put him under arrest, and he was taken to the lock-up. Here it was found that he was not fully dressed, being still in his night shirt. He was so weak that a carriage had to be procured in order to convey him the few squares necessary to go in order to reach the hospital.

Professor Shortlidge is a member of an old Quaker family. He graduated from Harvard University with honors, looking, since the leading member of his class in physical exercises. After graduating he went into the newspaper business, and subsequently started a boarding school for boys at Kennett Square. He removed his school to Media in 1874, and has since that time been one of the most successful institutions in the country, and one which has gained for itself an enviable reputation as a preparatory school for young men. Mr. Shortlidge was a man of culture and refinement, and was one of the representative citizens of the town. He took particular delight in outdoor sports with his pupils. He has four children by his first wife, who died about four years ago.

The victim, whose maiden name was Marie Jones, was about twenty-six years old, and of prepossessing appearance. Her mother is Mrs. Marie Dixon Jones, of Brookline, N. Y., who came into prominence in that city, a few years ago, by her suit against the Brooklyn Eagle for alleged libelous publications about a hospital conducted by her. The suit was recently decided against her. Her brother, Rev. Henry Dixon Jones, was pastor of Christ P. E. Church in this city, up to Dec. 1, when he resigned by request. The news of her daughter's death is a great shock to the mother, and it is feared she will lose her reason.

The unfortunate man does not yet realize what he has done, and is continually asking for his wife. This general opinion here is that he is insane. A few years ago his school was in a flourishing condition, but a recent year was brought to light. There is no modest brown stone front at No. 183 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, with a shining brass plate bearing the words, "Dr. Jones." Dr. Mary Amanda Dixon Jones is a physician of the allopathic school, a graduate of the Woman's Medical College of New York city, and practices as a

PRENDERGAST SEARCHED.

A Report Was Current That the Assassin Contemplated Suicide.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—A rumor was current to-day that Prendergast, the murderer of Mayor Harrison, had committed suicide. Jailer Morris was kept busy for two hours answering the telephone. There was nothing in the story. Prendergast's actions in the morning aroused the suspicions of guard Wallace, and the latter told the assassin to hold out his hands until he was searched.

"Why do you want to search me?" demanded Prendergast, angrily. "To see if you have anything concealed about you, of course," answered the guard. "If you fellows think I'm going to commit suicide, you are foolish," remarked the assassin, as he extended his hands. "If I have to die, I'm going to put you fellows to the bother of killing me." Nothing was found in the prisoner's pockets with which he could do himself injury.

COLOGNE, Dec. 31.—The Cologne Zeitung publishes full details of the attack upon the assassin, as he extended his hands. "If I have to die, I'm going to put you fellows to the bother of killing me." Nothing was found in the prisoner's pockets with which he could do himself injury.

ROMANCE AND HISTORY. NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—There is a romance in the life of Mrs. Shortlidge, who was killed by her husband at Media to-day, and there is a history in the life of her mother, Dr. Mary Amanda Dixon Jones. A page of that history was made public about three years ago. Brooklyn people remember well the daughter, a pretty, trim young woman, retiring in disposition and faithful to her mother, when that mother's recent was brought to light. There is no modest brown stone front at No. 183 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, with a shining brass plate bearing the words, "Dr. Jones." PENTECOST'S REWARD

The Famous New York Crank Given Office by Tammany.

Made Assistant District Attorney, at $7,500 a Year, for Upholding the Tax-Eating Tiger.

KNOWN IN INDIANAPOLIS

Where He Set Type Before Turning Preacher and Agitator.

His Appointment Severely Criticized on the Ground That He Has Been Practicing Law but One Year.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—The whirlwind of politics and the mutations of time have been prolific of strange happenings in these fleeting years of the nineteenth century, and not the least remarkable is the appointment of the erstwhile minstrel, printer, preacher, faddist, single-tax advocate, Socialist, Anarchist and semi-theist, Hugh Owen Pentecost as assistant district attorney of New York at an annual salary of $7,500 a year. Verily, it pays to stroke the tiger's back and pet its kittens. This Mr. Pentecost has done, and he has reaped the reward.

Many readers of the Journal will remember a gay young printer who set type on one of the Indianapolis dailies shortly after the close of the war. The type had a pleasing ring to it, and the printer was a dandy of them, liked to sing, dance and rattle the bones for the amusement of his fellow "comps," and was altogether a half-fledged well-to-do, not less sniffling than the majority of printers of those days. This was Hugh O. Pentecost at twenty. He is now forty-five, and has not lost that gift of pleasing people which made him attractive in his youth. But this is not what our correspondent wishes to tell.

Tammany Hall has done many queer things in its history, but the most singular of all, perhaps, is the appointment of Mr. Pentecost to a place that should be filled only by a first-class lawyer. Nearly all the local newspapers, Democrat and Republican alike, express astonishment at Pentecost's preferment, and denounce it as outrageous.

The ex-preacher was picked out by "Boss" Croker and foisted on Colonel Fellows, the district attorney. The Colonel never said a word in his own defense, but he did say that he understood him to be a "rice fellow." Tammany lawyers made wry faces when they heard the news. Not only was Mr. Pentecost a recent convert to the wig-wag, but he began to study law only two years and a half ago. In this State he would have had to wait six months longer before being admitted to the bar. He succeeds in general. Mr. Pentecost will take the oath of office at noon to-morrow.

One of the reasons that impelled Croker to appoint Pentecost is the war Dr. Parkhurst is making on Tammany. Croker has become alarmed, and for several weeks he has been endeavoring to "reorganize" his society by inducing "business men" to accept important offices in the organization, with the hope of drawing off Fellows, Tammany's chief enemy. This plan, however, is not proving a success. It is true that some "business men" were secured, but they were offsprings of the "tiger," having been, at some time or other, fed from the crib guarded by that beast. When Croker saw he could not change the "tiger's" stripes or conceal its claws, by paint or "purification," he changed his tactics. His new plan was to induce all Crokers to believe in fighting fire with fire, he conceived the idea of putting a preacher in an office, and a chief of murder in a jail.

With Pentecost as prosecutor, Tammany need not fear that cases against the "tiger" will be pushed with the vigor that might be used by an anti-Tammanyist. At the same time, Croker will be able to point to the presence of a general country lawyer in putting a preacher in office, is not an enemy of the so-called moral element of the city.

LIFE A MOUNTAIN BANK.

The World, in its local account of the appointment, says: Hugh O. Pentecost, whom the world has known as a Baptist minister, a Congregational preacher, a follower of Henry George, the editor of a reform weekly newspaper, a reformer in general, an atheist, and many other things, has been selected as an assistant district attorney at the request of Police Commissioner "Jimmy" Gilroy and the Police Board.

Mr. Pentecost has had an experience of one year as a lawyer and Tammany man. He received the official appointment at the office of the Police Board on Friday, directing him to appear at the office Monday morning to receive the official appointment and the oath.

The names of few men are more familiar to the public than that of Hugh O. Pentecost. He has been a prominent figure in the city for many years, and his career has been marked by a series of remarkable events. He was formerly a Baptist minister, a Congregational preacher, a follower of Henry George, the editor of a reform weekly newspaper, a reformer in general, an atheist, and many other things, has been selected as an assistant district attorney at the request of Police Commissioner "Jimmy" Gilroy and the Police Board.

OLD NEW YEAR

Mr. Depew on the Business Gloom and Future Outlook.

He Sees Signs of Encouragement Provided the Tariff Thinkers Can Be Forced to Stay Their Hand.

PROSPERITY IN COLORADO

New Gold Fields Have Benefited the Centennial State.

Other Industries in a Flourishing Condition—Big Figures from California—Idaho Mining Statistics.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 31.—The New York correspondent of the Dispatch telegraphs that paper that Chauncey M. Depew found time on Saturday, which was one of the busiest days he has had for a long time, to give a brief retrospect of the year just closing. He said:

"The year 1893 will remain in the memory of more people who have had it stamped indelibly upon their minds than any other year in the last quarter of a century. It will live in history as either an incident or an epoch in the story of American development."

"The consequences of the last presidential election are the fruitage of 1893. The country had been prosperous under a policy which had continued uninterrupted for thirty-one years. Its growth during that period had been beyond precedent either in its own history or that of any other country. The people had been made to believe by the persistent efforts of the preaching and prophecy of a quarter of a century that a tariff for revenue only a semi-free-trade policy would give an added impetus to national progress, and they so voted."

"When, however, after the inauguration of the President the business of the country became fully alive to the impending revolution it fell victim to a sudden and unreasoning alarm. A panic ensued which threw people out of employment, suspended many industries and caused greater paralysis of trade than anything that has happened in more than a decade. This was charged to our silver purchasing law and we all, with one voice, shouted for its repeal. Although every business in the country and every employment in the land demanded its repeal, the Democratic majority fooled with the question for three months while the country was going to rack and ruin, and the repeal bill finally reached Cleveland for his signature by the help and vote of the Republican Senators and members of Congress."

"We then discovered that the relief which we anticipated was only partial. Fear of such tariff revision as would cripple or suspend the business interests of the country prevented by the resumption of the policy of trade that anything that has happened in more than a decade. This was charged to our silver purchasing law and we all, with one voice, shouted for its repeal. Although every business in the country and every employment in the land demanded its repeal, the Democratic majority fooled with the question for three months while the country was going to rack and ruin, and the repeal bill finally reached Cleveland for his signature by the help and vote of the Republican Senators and members of Congress."

"These questions will be solved in some way in 1894. We Republicans believe, of course, that our tried and proved policy will receive such emphatic indorsement that it will not again be questioned until the miseries and misfortunes of the present are forgotten. But 1893 will remain for many a year to teach the lesson or point the moral or enforce the argument from the professor's chair in the lecture room of the college, from the public platform and from the editorial desk."

"The year stands unique in its gloom, its disappointments and its failure to give in population, in business, in employment, in promise of more hopeful and happy conditions."

"The railroads of the country have not suffered proportionately to other business. This is due largely to the world's fair. The construction of mileage, and especially those east of Chicago, to say that the railway system of the United States, as a whole cannot be charged with the difficulties and disasters which produced the bankruptcy of those four systems. Their countries would have come under the same conditions as those of the Pacific and Reading systems is what makes the abnormal aggregate of 1893."

"It is only just to others, and especially those east of Chicago, to say that the railway system of the United States, as a whole cannot be charged with the difficulties and disasters which produced the bankruptcy of those four systems. Their countries would have come under the same conditions as those of the Pacific and Reading systems is what makes the abnormal aggregate of 1893."
